enjoy a taste of Steubenville's history at Froehlich's Classic Corner. The Ohio Power Building, built in 1936, was designed and engineered to showcase the convenience of modern electricity. It featured several technological innovations and earned fame as the first building in the United States to be air conditioned by a working heat pump.

The building has recently been restored and reopened by Greg and Deb Froehlich. In an effort to recapture a bygone era, the Froehlichs have taken extreme care to retain much of the original 1930's Art Deco design, including the luminaries on the columns and the lightning bolt pattern on the staircase. The bar is accented with the polished aluminum electric symbols that once graced the counters in the Ohio Power reception area.

Greg and Deb invite you to visit them soon and share great food, great music and a sense of Steubenville's past.
